

I once again find myself looking for a way to make a bit of money and having been reasonably successful with an online venture I have decided to expand in the online marketing game.

When one starts to investigate the available opportunities online there seems to be a never ending list of sites that promise you financial freedom, the life style that you always dreamt of and so it goes on. The difficult part is working out what do I have to do and how much will it cost me to get into this magical situation. Many of these schemes don't seem to want to tell you what it is you are selling or what the cost is to join until they have you well and truly on the hook so to speak.

I recently looked at 4, 2 that promote personal development products and 2 that are online business tools in that they give what is needed to be a successful online marketer. In most cases I found that if you had a spare $2,000 - $20,000 to chuck in you could quite possibly go quite well as the compensation plans often require you to make sales for your up line before you start to earn for yourself or you may be able to jump up the cue by purchasing the products when you sign up. These deals all seem to provide you with all the training and support you need to be successful in your new venture weather you are a seasoned online marketer or a novice like me. The programs I looked provided very comprehensive marketing material including personalised websites and tools promoting these sites that seem quite straight forward and easy to use without the need for a high level of internet savvy.

The system I chose is free to join but you do need to spend some money on joining some of the income streams and advertising The thing I like about this system is that you can decide for yourself how much you spend.

So can you make money online? Yes if you are prepared to:

- Be patient.
- Don't expect to get rich quick.
- Work hard as nothing is for nothing.
- Be prepared to learn as you go.
- Don't give up.
